

WHY should Illinois citizens pay
more in taxes while credit unions receive
exemptions to the tune of millions of dollars each year.

Large credit unions – the ones that have grown beyond the definition of what credit unions were created to be – still live in a tax-free environment. The rest of us are bearing the brunt of Illinois’ increased personal and corporate business taxes expected to generate $6.8 billion for state coffers.
